RSO for Marine Animal Rights Looking for New Members

Collegiate Advocates for the Rights of Marine Animals is looking for new members. An RSO on campus at Central Michigan University, CARMA's mission is to contribute in helping protect marine life.

Meetings are every other Monday at 8 p.m. in Dow 179. Students can walk in at any point during the semester to join.

A small organization, CARMA is looking for new members to help it achieve some of the bigger goals it has. One major goal CARMA would like to achieve is to pass legislation protecting marine life.

CARMA is also looking to start a spring break trip to go to the ocean and volunteer with different activities whether it is picking up trash, helping turtles find their way into the ocean or anything else it can do to help.

While not near the ocean, CARMA has plenty to do in Mount Pleasant. CARMA would like to start fundraising so it can donate to different programs dedicated to helping marine life. It would love to have fun events on campus to not only raise money, but also raise awareness for its cause.

Meetings are exciting and involve current events in marine wildlife with activities as well. CARMA is a great way to meet other students with like-minded interests. It is open to all majors, and is a great resume builder because of the volunteer work students do.

CARMA is always looking for new ideas for its meetings and events.
